Braves Team Report

RHP Jaret Wright is pitching better than ever because he finally has become a pitcher and not simply a thrower. He has developed a good changeup that makes his lively fastball even more effective, but the key to his success is locating his sinker.

LF Charles Thomas has established himself in a platoon with Eli Marrero, a role once pegged for Dewayne Wise. The team is committed to Thomas, who has a higher offensive ceiling, and sent Wise back to the minors when he came off the D.L.

IF Mark DeRosa likely will be a utility player as long as he is with the team, but Nick Green's emergence clouds his future. Green is a younger and cheaper option.

SEE A DIFFERENT GAME: RHPs John Smoltz and Paul Byrd have both used a hyperbaric chamber to help keep their surgically repaired elbows healthy. When at home, Smoltz often sleeps with his arm in the chamber, which helps heal injured tissue. He also has a chamber at Turner Field, which Byrd uses before starts and after throwing sessions. Both claim the chamber enables them to recover more quickly.
